Campus WorkLink : NGR

What is it?

The National Graduate Register (NGR) and the Canadian Association of Career Educators and Employers' Campus WorkLink have merged their services in a new partnership agreement. The new system, Campus WorkLink : NGR, is a bilingual national Internet database that quickly matches employers' precise needs with the skills of young job seekers. It offers candidates greater access to employers and jobs across Canada and provides efficient and cost-effective recruiting for employers.

Who's involved?

Campus WorkLink : NGR has two main targets: candidates (university and college students, recent graduates senior high school students) from various fields of study, and all Canadian employers who are looking for qualified employees.

How does it work?

Candidates: Candidates file standardized résumés on the Campus WorkLink : NGR Internet site where businesses across the country access them directly. Résumés can be instantly accessed from anywhere at any time, providing students with a powerful job-seeking tool. In addition to permanent, full-time positions, students can also apply to work experience or internship opportunities on-line.

Employers: Employers can post jobs, company profiles or national campaigns on the high-traffic site for students and other businesses to review. When searching for qualified candidates to fill temporary, co-op or permanent positions, employers can perform a targeted, efficient search of the Campus WorkLink : NGR site. If a business does not have Internet access, Campus WorkLink : NGR can perform searches for them.

Campus WorkLink : NGR is maintained and promoted by more than 550 universities, colleges and private institutions across Canada as well as by the Experience Canada youth initiative. In partnership with the federal government's Youth Employment Strategy, the Campus WorkLink : NGR project offers employment opportunities for youth interns on campus to help students obtain career information and create effective Campus WorkLink : NGR profiles.
